Brown at 60: The Doll Test (Legal Defense Fund article: In the 1940s, psychologists Kenneth and Mamie Clark designed and conducted a series of experiments known colloquially as the doll tests, to study the damaging psychological effects of segregation on African-American children.)

The Mark of a Criminal Record (2004 employment discrimination study, conducted in Milwaukee by Northwestern University. The study provides a comparison of the experiences of equally qualified black and white applicants, assessing the extent to which direct racial discrimination persists in hiring, and finding that even whites with criminal records received more favorable treatment by prospective employers than blacks without criminal records.)

(Dr. King's famous Letter from Birmingham Jail is a response to a statement written by several Alabama clergymen who assert that Dr. King's methods are both "unwise and untimely." Dr. King responds with this polite but powerful letter, referencing biblical, classical and early American figures to counter the arguments of the clergymen.)

TO WATCH

Ava DuVernay’s Netflix documentary The 13th is indispensable for anyone who wants to better understand racism in the American prison system, and even better is her When They See Us, which tells the harrowing story of the Central Park Five.

- Raoul Peck’s I Am Not Your Negro is a documentary about the life of poet, author and activist James Baldwin.
- A Time for Burning is a fascinating little time capsule, a 1967 documentary about one white pastor’s attempt to racially integrate his Omaha, Nebraska church and the incredible obstacles he faced along the way. The movie is free on YouTube and features the famous scene in which future longtime Nebraska State Senator Ernie Chambers delivers this painful message to Pastor William Youngdahl.
- Spike Lee’s entire filmography belongs on this list, but Do the Right Thing remains one of his most vital works: a 1989 acerbic comedy that has only grown more poignant with age.
- Just Mercy, the film adaptation of Bryan Stevenson’s book referenced above, stars Michael B. Jordan, Jamie Foxx and Brie Larson and is free from all video-on-demand platforms through June.

TO LISTEN

- The Truth’s Table podcast features three black women — Michelle Higgins, Ekemini Uwan and Dr. Christina Edmonson — talking about theology, culture, race and justice. Listen to it here.
- NPR’s Code Switch has become an important hub of conversations around race and culture in the U.S., starring a group of journalists “fascinated by the overlapping themes of race, ethnicity and culture, how they play out in our lives and communities, and how all of this is shifting.” Listen here.
